Please join us via webinar for Financial Reform Legislation: Are You Prepared for What's Coming?

Tuesday, July 20, 2010 (Part I)
Wednesday, July 28, 2010 (Part II)

The United States Congress is about to enact groundbreaking financial reform legislation. Arising out of the recent financial crisis, this sweeping legislation will affect every institution engaged in providing financial services and will alter the manner in which many financial services companies are supervised and, in some cases, structured. Our two-part program on this massive legislation will provide an overview of the legislation's key provisions. It will also provide insight into the most significant changes affecting banks, bank holding companies, savings institutions, broker-dealers, investment advisers, insurance companies, and other participants in the financial services industry, as well as the impact on non-financial companies.

Part I—Tuesday, July 20, 2010: In the first part, we will cover the principal provisions of the legislation impacting domestic and foreign financial institutions. Program highlights include:

- Regulation of companies deemed to present systemic risk: Is "too big to fail" gone for good?
- Reform of banking supervision and regulation: What it means for the agencies and regulated entities
- The Volcker Rule on proprietary trading: What it means for the financial services industry
- The new consumer financial protection authority
- Federal preemption: Is it dead?
- Implications of the legislation for foreign banks

Part II—Wednesday, July 28, 2010: In the second part, we will take a look at the provisions of the legislation that may affect other financial services businesses (as well as banks) and we will cover the impact of the legislation on companies that deal in and clear derivatives, as well as all public companies. Program highlights include:

- Broker-dealer and investment advisory reform
- Hedge fund and private equity fund regulation
- Derivatives reform
- Restrictions on executive compensation and other new corporate governance changes
- New agency dealing with insurance company regulation

Future Roundtables: We will be conducting Financial Markets Regulatory Roundtables over the coming months to examine specific topics within the new financial reform legislation and upcoming agency rulemakings. Topics will be dictated by events and developments in Washington and will be announced in advance.
